HOKE AND DEMOCRACY.

Hoke Smith is now a thoroughly loyal party man—so he says. He is spending much of his time proclaiming his loyalty and denouncing the fact that he is not left alone to battle for the party against Tom Watson.

And when you look at it from Hoke Smith's standpoint, he is a fit and proper man for the job. "Put a rogue to catch a rogue," Hoke and Tom are men of the same stripe. They conspired together in the late Presidential convention, and the outcome was a final repudiation of the national Democratic administration. Hoke says Tom is responsible, because he adjourned the convention before he could bring his mind to act in defense of the Democratic party. He says if Tom had just given him a little longer time, he would have put one over on him, and the Palmer delegates at a single blow—and thus saved his party from repudiation by his and Tom's delegates.

Of course Hoke declared the next day, "We've beat 'em to a frazzle." And he thought he had them. He had previously declared that his reservations to the League of Nations, which Mr. Lodge and the balance of the Republican Senate had followed him on, entirely annulled the measure, and therefore Mr. Watson's anti-league followers ought to be satisfied with him. FIRST DISTRICT EDITORS GUESTS OF STATESBORO

DAY IS MADE PLEASANT ONE FOR HOME-FOLKS AS WELL AS FOR VISITORS.

On Monday past, the members of the First District Editorial Convention, embracing the counties of the first congressional district, were visitors to Statesboro in their tri-annual convention. As an expression of appreciation of their coming, the people of Statesboro joined with the editors in an outing through the county in the afternoon which was a most delightful event for the home-folks as well as for the visitors.

Among the visitors was the well-known Dan Bickers, the poet of the Savannah Morning News, whose daily "Good Morning to You," "Verses and a Vignette," is a feature of that excellent daily. Writing for his paper on the day following his visit, Mr. Bickers said:

"There was not a speech made—no set address of welcome or remarks in profanity, nor any of the organization nor by any invited speaker. There was no need for address of welcome—Editor David B. Turner of the Bulloch Times and Statesboro News, accompanied by representatives of the city and county, by J. S. Kenan, who owns a printing plant in Statesboro, and by several other citizens, met the trains, greeted the newspaper men and with that sincere hospitality, that natural cordiality of friends, they made each man feel that he was being received as a guest, not as a visitor."

The group of business men took a day off until they whirled the party to the station in the afternoon just in time to catch the train, they spent the hours in showing the editors a fine town and a great county. In reality, the "convention" was held all the afternoon all over the county—a riding meeting of revelation to the visitors of what Bulloch has.

Shortly after noon the visitors were guests of the Statesboro citizens at the Jaekel Hotel, where Manager Paulsen served a delicious dinner. Among the newspaper men present were: L. W. Moore of the Springfield Herald, president of the association; W. L. Sullivan of the Waynesboro True Citizen, secretary of the association; J. C. Burkhalter of the Millen News; William D. L. Miller; J. B. Turner, Bulloch Times; and Statesboro News; J. S. Kenan, print, Statesboro, and others. Citizens who lunched with their guests were Judge J. W. Rountree, mayor; J. E. McCrae, councilman; R. P. Donaldson, president of the Southern Bank; R. Kennedy, road commissioner; W. H. DeLoach, sheriff of Bulloch county; J. W. Rackley, councilman; J. B. Martin, councilman, and others.

Following the delicious luncheon, a dozen automobiles were placed at the disposal of the party for a ride over the county, and in addition to the citizens who lunched with the editors others also joined with their cars and accompanied the visitors to points of interest. Among the additional ones who went over the country were Dan N. Riggs, Chas. Pigne, Pete Donaldson, L. M. Mikel, Homer Simmons, S. J. Crouch, R. M. Monte, superintendent of schools; E. M. Dyal, R. Lee Moore, LeRoy Cowart, F. D. Olliff and others.

Some of the things which the newspaper men learned about Statesboro and Bulloch county they will remember:

Statesboro is a good town, with modern business blocks and stores and handsome homes. Along Savannah avenue and Zetterover avenue and South Main street, the many residences of elegant appearance—mansions which would do credit to any city. Statesboro has nearly two miles of the best paved streets of any town in the South—done under the administration of Mayor Rountree, and completed only a little while ago at a cost of a little more than fifty thousand dollars. The paving has been pronounced a model piece of work in its plan and quality. Statesboro has handsome churches, fine public buildings, modern schools, and claims the "best school superintendent in the state."

Statesboro is made up of a population from the farms. With about 3,800 people, it is said that possibly one-half the white families in Statesboro own farms. Bulloch county has several other towns, but of the population ten times the size of the county seat, nine-tenths are directly interested in farming. There is not a mill or a factory in the county or town. The people are too busy creating wealth, producing raw materials, to turn that wealth of material into finished product. There is not even a cotton seed oil mill or a peanut oil mill in the county, and the yield of these products is immense. There is a packing house, now reorganized, a great white plant that is equipped to handle thousands of carcasses a week. There are nine cucumber vats at one point in the city, each vat containing today 70,000 pounds of cucumbers in brine—six hundred and thirty thousand pounds of "fundamental" pickle. But the content of these gigantic vats is shipped to the pickle factories in other parts of the country. The industries mentioned, with some lumber concerns, are by recently perfected plan, being the nearest approach to manufacturing in the county.

Over some of the best roads in the state the party of editors whirled to see the demonstrations of diversified farming. These roads are of the sand clay surface construction and they are by recently perfected plan, being the nearest approach to manufacturing in the county.

The list of publication was compiled after local boards had been instructed to segregate and send to Washington records of all men classified as draft deserters during the war period. A total of 489,000 records were forwarded, but on examination at the war department it was shown that 163,000 of these dealt with cases disposed of during the war. The records of the men classified as draft deserters during the war period, a total of 489,000 records were forwarded, but on examination at the war department it was shown that 163,000 of these dealt with cases disposed of during the war.

The records of 161,000 other cases showed that the desertion was not charged against the men, and they were eliminated from the list.

The war department wishes to clearly understand that men who are guilty of willful desertion will not be relieved of the consequences of their misconduct, nor will they be discharged because they write to the adjutant general of the army and request their discharge," the statement said.

It adds that because of the tremendous expense which would be incurred in paying the $50 reward for apprehension of the draft deserters has been temporarily suspended and the task of rounding them up left for the present to the patriotism of the nation.

Counsel for Martens already has asked that a government commission be sent to Stockholm to investigate a system in which he is accused of being implicated. Begun six months ago, the smuggling is described by government officials as the most perfectly organized courier service before Bolshevik agents abroad and in the United States that has been discovered.

HARDWICK'S CLIENT IN DEEPER TROUBLE

MARTENS FOUND TO BE CONNECTED WITH SCHEME TO SMUGGLE DIAMONDS TO U. S.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 13.—Traffic by Bolshevik agents in precious stones, supposed to have formed part of the famous jewels of the Russian royal family, has been unearthed by federal authorities. The 131 diamonds found on Neils Jacobson, a Swedish sailor, by customs officials in New York, July 23, it became known today were enclosed in a package addressed to "Comrade Martens." Using this as a lead, federal officials began an investigation which they declare has definitely connected Ludwig C. A. K. Martens, self-styled soviet ambassador to the United States, with the traffic. Disclosure of the fact that the package was intended for soviet agents in this country was withheld by customs authorities when Jacobson was arrested, although the details as to the seizure of the jewels themselves were then made public.

Jacobson, officials said today, identified during the course of the investigation a photograph of Stantur Neustrova, former secretary of Martens, as a person to whom previous packages had been delivered.

Introduction of the alleged incriminating evidence of the traffic in precious stones between soviet representatives in this country and abroad at the last hearing in the deportation proceedings against Martens resulted in postponement of further hearing until Aug. 30, to enable the styled ambassador to obtain evidence, if possible, in refutation of the charges.

Counsel for Martens already has asked that a government commission be sent to Stockholm to investigate a system in which he is accused of being implicated. Begun six months ago, the smuggling is described by government officials as the most perfectly organized courier service before Bolshevik agents abroad and in the United States that has been discovered.

Enclosed about the diamonds taken from the possession of the Swedish sailor Jacobson, who officials exonerate from any complicity in the illegal proceedings was a quantity of communist literature including an "appeal of the executive committee of the third international at Moscow to the I. W. W." This manifesto declared:

"Unless the workers of the other countries rise against their own capitalists the Russian revolution cannot last."

MRS. D. C. WILSON.

After a brief illness, Mrs. D. C. Wilson died on Saturday afternoon, August 7, at her home near Brooklet. Interment was at Black creek cemetery Sunday afternoon. Besides her husband, deceased is survived by one small son.

GOVERNMENT TO PRINT NAMES OF SLACKERS

WILL THEREUPON OFFER SUITABLE REWARD FOR MEN CHARGED WITH DESERTION.

Washington, Aug. 16.—Less than a percent of more than 2,400,000 men registered under the selective service act during the war have been found chargeable with willful desertion, according to an announcement issued by the war department. The figures, 72,931 against whom desertion charges have been recorded, and this represents, the statement says, a "tremendous improvement over the draft record of the War Between the States."

The department will soon make public the names of those branded as deserters and the statement adds that the government "desires to obtain the co-operation of the various state and local officials, patriotic societies and other agencies, including the department of justice, in bringing about the apprehension of these men."

Pending publication of the list, the statement continues, any man charged with desertion may avoid arrest by surrendering at the nearest army post and his status determined. If his record is cleared, his name will be omitted from the deserter list.

Those in doubt as to their status are urged to address inquiries to the adjutant general of the army.

The list of publication was compiled after local boards had been instructed to segregate and send to Washington records of all men classified as draft deserters during the war period. A total of 489,000 records were forwarded, but on examination at the war department it was shown that 163,000 of these dealt with cases disposed of during the war.

The war department wishes to clearly understand that men who are guilty of willful desertion will not be relieved of the consequences of their misconduct, nor will they be discharged because they write to the adjutant general of the army and request their discharge," the statement said.

It adds that because of the tremendous expense which would be incurred in paying the $50 reward for apprehension of the draft deserters has been temporarily suspended and the task of rounding them up left for the present

MONEY—FARM LOANS—MONEY

The act creating the Federal Land Banks, was a piece of legislation especially designed for the interest of the farmers of America, and to best serve their interest its makers realized that a plan must be worked out whereby the farmer could reduce his loan by annual payments, so that he could have the money to use in other ways. Since the Federal Land Bank has withdrawn from the farm loan business, some insurance companies, which realized the popularity of this plan as well as the convenience to the farmer, have adopted it also and are offering loans to the farmers of Bulloch county on the identical plan of the Federal Land Bank Loan.

Our plan gives you a loan for the smallest initial cost, a loan for a term of 10, 15, or 20 years, with the privilege of paying it up at any time, without any additional cost or expense to you.

If you are interested in securing a new loan or renewing an old one it will pay you to investigate our proposition as we can save you money and give you a loan that you can handle with ease.

shaped and smooths them, a tractor-drawn machine doing miles and miles of road a day.

There is little waste land about Statesboro—every patch being made to yield its harvest. Here and there is a tract of original pine, left intact and beautiful, and some stretches of younger timber are left to grow. But in the main there are cultivated fields everywhere.

And mighty little cotton was visible. Bulloch county farmers are going in for corn and hogs and peanuts and sugar cane, melons, truck crops and small fruits. One field of corn seen by the visitors, that of Sheriff-elect B. T. Mallard, matches anything to be seen in the southern Illinois corn belt.

The visitors stopped at the farm of Joshua Smith, a young man who has made of his place a model farm, one of which the pictures made from it would set off the pages of any agricultural publication. There is not a wooden post along the line of any fence of his farm. Of 800 acres in the home place—there are but few in farm besides—there are but few in cotton. Corn he raises for turning into pigs. One field of seventy acres he has practically made with one man's labor in thirty days, using strong mules and modern machinery. His home is, for comfort and beauty, equipped with hot and cold water, electric lights from current made on the place, with dairy and laundry and every appliance and convenience to make life and work easy. His lot is full of fat, sleek mules and horses, and even the watering trough is equipped with an automatic arrangement which keeps the water flowing only as needed by the stock. Pure bred cows are in his pastures. In a great peanut field hundreds of pure bred hogs roamed; they never get hungry. There was a pond near the middle of his farm, and by the draining underground he has trailed the pond off to a lower field and along a ditch in which in the hot afternoon fifty head of beautifully marked hogs wallowed contentedly. In the past three months Mr. Smith has shipped five carloads of hogs to outside markets. And there are hundreds of other farmers in Bulloch raising and shipping hogs every season in large numbers.

From the Joshua Smith place the party was driven to E. M. Bohler's. Mr. Bohler has a peach nursery where thousands of young peach trees grow in a field like cotton stalks in rows. He values his place at more than $1,000 and acre—land on which are 140 peach trees from each of which he gathered more than $100 worth of nuts. He is developing English walnuts, grafted on the old black stock and is producing economic nuts. He was among the first in the state to raise the "honey dew" melon—and the group of visitors was served a dozen big watermelons and as many "honey dews" as a "token of appreciation," Mr. Bohler declared, of the visit.

Those two types of farms were but two of the many which the party visited along the fine stretch of the Dixie Overland Highway over which they returned to Statesboro, after seeing the grounds and buildings of the First District A. and M. school. Along the country roads, too, the visitors saw several of the rural schools. Every white school in the county has just been overhauled and remodeled, each having a distinctive design in architecture and a scientifically arranged for the comfort and proper development of the children, as to lighting and ventilation. In one rural high school there are an auditorium, separate school buildings for domestic arts and other modern features of improved school service.

If the newspaper men had had business to transact, they would have had no time for business—they were kept too busy seeing this one Georgia county first-hand. They learned things about a typical Georgia county; they gained the cordial and natural interest of a group of fine Georgians who are doing things to make one county great and independent. They saw a bit of real Georgia in Bulloch county. The hosts accompanied the visitors to their train and it was after the train pulled out that the group got together and selected Waynesboro as the place of the meeting for the third Monday in November.

The "Fordson" Tractor

is the result of extensive trials and experiments conducted by Mr. Henry Ford, covering a period of many years. Before placing the tractor on the market, every detail has been thoroughly tried out under actual farming conditions in various parts of this country and abroad.

Experience has pointed to the small, light tractor as being the one machine which will fill all varying conditions satisfactorily.

Being small, light and economical, the "FORDSON" Tractor is adapted for use on small farms, as well as on the largest. It will pull all farm implements and do the work generally done by horses on the farm. In addition, by its belt pulley, the tractor will operate farm machinery, such as a threshing, ensilage cutter, feed-grinder, sawmill, etc., making the "FORDSON" a truly universal tractor.

In design and construction the "FORDSON" takes a long step in approaching the ideal tractor. The simplicity of its operation and construction will at once appeal to the farmer.

Special devices have been perfected to keep out dust and dirt. All moving parts are enclosed and thoroughly lubricated. The number of lubricating points requiring attention are very few and easily accessible.

The motor, transmission and rear axle are assembled together, forming one rigid unit, which, combined with the three-point suspension, relieves these parts of all strain.

The absence of any frame gives accessibility to all parts for making adjustments or repairs, and allows the tractor to be taken apart in a few minutes.

The motor is of substantial design and is capable of delivering its full power continuously. It embodies features which have been used with success in other fields for many years.

The tractor is equipped with a special design vaporizer. The air supply is drawn through water. The wear on the cylinder walls is thus greatly reduced because of having been removed from the air.

We are in shape to take care of the tractor the same as we have the Ford Car and Truck.

We expect to hold a demonstration at or near Statesboro in the near future (date to be announced later), when you can see exactly what the tractor will do.

Make arrangements now to turn under your cotton stalks and destroy the weevil.

"SIDELIGHTS ON GEORGIA POLITICS"

(By James B. Nevin, in The Atlanta Georgian.)

In seeking to create "an atmosphere of victory," one must be careful not to create it for the other fellow.

For instance, the vehemence of the fight now being waged upon Mr. Hardwick has had the effect of solidifying a real "atmosphere of victory"—for Mr. Hardwick.

Mr. Hardwick has been in the race for governor actively for more than six weeks. During that time he has been attacked with bitterness unparalleled.

If there were anything left for the opposition to say against Mr. Hardwick, and it could think of it, it would be said—as the colored brother said, most doubtless.

After listening with varying degrees of patience to this continuing tirade of abuse and vilification of Mr. Hardwick, the public seems to have concluded that Mr. Hardwick must be a citizen of some considerable consequence, otherwise he would not be cursed with so much enthusiasm, up hill and down dale.

Frenzied citizens with axes to grind do not waste time racing around cursing and abusing dead ones.

That, gentle reader, is about the surest thing you know in politics.

Wherefore, I opine that the effort designed to create an "atmosphere of victory" AGAINST Hardwick, really has helped create an atmosphere of victory for him—this time the phrase without quotation marks.

And by the same token, take it from one who has observed many political campaigns well. If not always wisely, such an atmosphere is in process of creation in respect of Mr. Watson, as things are going nowadays.

About the most dangerous thing to the anti-Watson outfit just now is continued misrepresentation and his tenacious of attack upon the "red-headed one."

Believe me, there is the heftiest sort of kick back in such tactics nowadays.

A good many thousands of Georgians are hell bent as it is upon voting for Mr. Watson; a good many more thousands are being gathered to his banner by some of the sinister and mean propaganda and downright lies now being promulgated with so much vigor against him.

Never mind the whys or wherefores, this campaign is settling down to brass tacks.

And the more Hardwick and Watson are abused and called hard names—such as "traitor," "disloyalist" and the like, the stronger they grow and the more the likelihood of their election will grow and wax fat.

Not that there is anything specific in the matter so much; the thing analyzes out along theoretical lines and lines of experience that never yet have failed.

A lot of people in this world have been abused into office!

Seeking to create an "atmosphere of victory" is all right—unless in seeking to do it, you create it—and to stay put—for the other fellow.

Some of the anti-Hardwick folks and the anti-Watson folks would do well perhaps to remember that.

LIVER DIDN'T ACT DIGESTION WAS BAD

Says 65 year Old Kentucky Lady, Who Tells How She Was Relieved After a Few Doses of Black-Draught.

Meadowville, Ky.—Mrs. Cynthia Higginbotham, of this town, says: "At my age, which is 65, the liver does not act so well as when young. A few years ago, my stomach was all out of fix. I was constipated, my liver didn't act. My digestion was bad, and it took so little to upset me. My appetite was gone. I was very weak. I decided I would give Black-Draught a thorough trial as I knew it was highly recommended for this trouble. I began taking it. I felt better after a few doses. My appetite improved and I became stronger. My bowels acted naturally and the least trouble was soon righted with a few doses of Black-Draught."

Seventy years of successful use has made Theodor's Black-Draught a standard, household remedy. Every member of every family, at times, need the help that Black-Draught can give in cleansing the system and relieving the troubles that come from constipation, indigestion, lax liver, etc. You cannot keep well unless your stomach, liver and bowels are in good working order. Keep them that way. Try Black-Draught. It acts promptly, gently and in a natural way. If you feel sluggish, take a dose tonight. You will feel fresh tomorrow. Price 25c. a package—One cent a dose. All druggists. J. 69

MR. BRANNEN MAKES REPLY TO MR. CONE

Editor of Bulloch Times:
I read an article in your last week's paper from Wesley Cone, a member of the American Legion in Statesboro, in reply to an article I had published in another paper.

I made the charge that the American Legion was a political society. He denies this. The Atlanta Post of the American Legion brought out Hugh M. Dorsey for United States Senator and paid his assessment, and denounced Watson and Hardwick. Then other Posts over the state have endorsed the stand of the Atlanta Post. They have selected one of their number by the name of Sirrman to come down to the First District and sell us how to vote. The negro Post in Savannah have also denounced Watson and Hardwick.

It is true that certain members of the Legion refuse to be controlled by the political bosses in the Legion and some say they are done with it. As to who is right or wrong, Mr. Cone's statement and mine, is for the public to say. The Post in Statesboro has about thirty-five members and not one-tenth of the young men who were in the army belong to the Legion, and they have probably seen enough of its political acts to distrust them. At present men and societies by their acts and conduct and not by their pretensions, Judas Iscariot pretended to be a Christian, and Benedict Arnold pretended to be a patriot. We fought the war to put down militarism in Germany and we don't want to get a strange hold on our people.

Mr. Cone says, "Hardwick, Watson and myself fought every suggested plan to win the war." This is untrue. I fought only the conscription law, and I think I was right. I was afraid of the right judgment, this law and the men who were in the war are proving that my fears were not unfounded. Before we got into the war our standing army was $2,000 men and the last Congress made it 300,000 men, while Wilson's administration recommended an army of 600,000 men. Why such a big army in time of peace? If this is not militarism, what is it?

He has much to say about Soviet Russia. And my answer to that is this: That a majority of the people of Russia have the right to set up just such a government as the majority of the people want. This is pure Democracy. Four million of Russians during the first two years of the war laid down their lives on the battle fields against the armies of Germany, and saved France and probably England. They are worthy of every praise instead of abuse.

Speaking of patriotism, a federal judge in Montana recently used the following language: "Patriotism is the cement that binds the foundation of the super-structure of the state. The safety of the latter depends upon the integrity of the former. Like religion, patriotism is a virtue, so indispensable and exalted, that its excesses pass with little censure. But when it descends to fanaticism it is reprehensible quality of the religion, that incited the tortures of the inquisition and burned heretics at the stake, and is cruel and murderous. In its name, as in the name of patriotism, many crimes have been committed, and is a favorite mask for hypocrisy."

With all his prowess in the war will Wesley please tell us how he managed to get back home with his life, and without a German scratch on his body?

It is said that "self praise is half scandal," and I make no pretensions to exalted patriotism, loyalty or any of the other great virtues. The public is the best judge of a man's life and general character. I need not say the men and women of Bulloch county (leaving out myself) that during the war every one of them did their duty in helping win the war. They bought bonds, stamps, etc., and some of them made sacrifices to do so.

Many of them gave their boys as sacrifices on the battle fields of Europe and in the camps at home. And I don't think they made all of these sacrifices, that when the war had been fought and won, that they would turn over the political destiny of our country to the American Legion, the League of Nations, and the great financial interest. If they do, and establish in this country a military and financial machine, then we will go the way of Germany. We may have established Democracy in Europe, but we will lose it at home, and without a German scratch on his body?

The issue is plain. Will you vote for Watson and Hardwick, who are making a fight for great constitutional principles and against large armies, compulsory military training, Wilson's League of Nations and autocracy, or will you vote against them? It is your privilege and duty to do one or the other.

Yours truly,
J. A. BRANNEN.

anybody, and that it will be big enough to have a place in it for all Georgians. The truth is, so it seems to me, that we as a people are about to lose our equilibrium, politically, at least. In the heat of political battle we do and say things that would be better left unspoken and unaid. The American Legion gets mad and fights Mr. Watson because Mr. Watson opposes the Legion. It gets mad and fights Mr. Hardwick because Mr. Hardwick did not vote for the Legion, and its attack on Mr. Hardwick is as unjust as it is unprovoked and unjust.

The real truth is that all Georgians are for the government. They merely differ as to the best policy for the government to pursue. Some people think, and they are good and honest in their belief, that we ought to have a League of Nations, and just such a one as President Wilson advocates and brought back from Paris. Others think that it would be all right to have a League of Nations, one with American reservations. While still others think that there ought to be no League of Nations at all, and contend that this government cannot with safety become a member of any such League. This League is the real issue, and it is unnecessary to drag Russia, Anarchists, I. W. W.'s and Bolsheviks into this campaign. All people, everywhere, abide lawlessness in every form, whether it be anarchism or bolshevism.

I would like to suggest to Mr. Cone and such other like members of the American Legion, since they seek to monopolize all the patriotism in Georgia, and to direct people whom to vote against, and to censor other people's patriotism and politics, that there is a way whereby they can forever gain a warm place in the hearts of all people, and that is by simply going over to Russia and exterminating all anarchists and bolsheviks. There is none of either in Georgia. As they have already directed us to vote against Watson and Hardwick this time, I feel sure that such a powerful and mighty organization could clean up all that bunch "over there" and still have left enough time to get back here to instruct us how to vote before another election rolls around.

Respectfully,
FRANCIS B. HUNTER.

BOYS

BOYS are well-known. You don't have to go to far lands or to the County Fair to look upon them. Everywhere, it is still the style to have Boys.

Perhaps you are trying to run one or more Boys right this minute. Then you will know that since the world began they were never so tremendously important as now. Your hopes and your aims center on them. You must deliver them out of Boyhood into successful Manhood.

Will your sons stay with the land, or will the will-o-the-wisp of the cities call them away? Armies of country Boys, who could be happiest and most successful on farms, respond to the artificial glamour of town life before they are old enough to know their own minds. They do not know that the rewards of country life—in money, health, and happiness—are far greater. Make them realize that! Guide the restless ambitions of your Boys and spare no pains!

Machines have been a powerful factor in stemming the flow to the cities. Machines banish drudgery and make labor interesting; machines foster the love of mechanics in the Boys; machines are builders of fortunes.

You now own many of the machines made by the International Harvester Company. We are headquarters for the International Full Line, including Titan tractors, International engines, and manure spreaders, Primrose cream separators, McCormick and Deering harvesting, mowing, and corn machines, tillage tools, PTO plows, etc. Give the Boys every chance for liking farming and farm life. Perhaps more of these machines will help keep them contented.

Some Reasons Why Overstreet Should be Returned to Congress

By J. W. Overstreet Campaign Committee

Congressman J. W. Overstreet's Campaign Committee will endeavor in this article to give a brief sketch of the services he has rendered during the past three eventful years, and to give some good and valid reasons why he is entitled to re-election.

It will not be possible in this communication to review all the acts of Mr. Overstreet, but our desire is to call attention to some facts that may help the people, who do not know him personally, to learn more of his congressman and his activities since he was elected to serve them. Mr. Overstreet, himself, will during his campaign, speak to the people and give them a full account of his stewardship.

The following editorial comment on Mr. Overstreet's announcement appeared in a recent issue of the Sylvania Telephone, the Congressman's home paper:

"Congressman J. W. Overstreet has announced that he will be a candidate for re-election, and that he will, later on, give the people of his district an account of his stewardship. Mr. Overstreet has made us an active and useful congressman. He has been strictly on the job. Always on the alert with regard to any matter that affected the people of his district, and he has been vigorously behind every movement for the upbuilding of his district. No constituent of his has ever appealed to him in vain for aid in any matter whatsoever. Numerous evils were met upon him during and since the war, and no citizen of his district, however humble or obscure, can say that he was not always ready to aid and serve him."

"Congressman Overstreet is now serving his second term, and his four years' service and the experience and influence that he has gained, will qualify him for greater usefulness in his district in the future and for better service to his country. On his record, and for his faithful service to the people, he is entitled to re-election at their hands."

In selecting a congressman, the people are not interested in the wild promises and pratings of the demagogue, but they are vitally concerned in having a man who honestly and efficiently represents them in Congress, and when they get such a man, they are not in a great hurry to change. From expressions coming in daily to Mr. Overstreet from his constituents in different parts of the district it would seem that there is no general desire on the part of our people for a change. Colonel Lester remained in Congress from this district continuously for sixteen years, and Mr. Edwards for ten years.

The remarks of the honorable Champ Clark, some years ago, on "The Making of a Representative," are very pertinent to the present situation. He said:

"A man has to learn to be a representative just as he must learn to be a blacksmith, a carpenter, a farmer, an engineer, a lawyer, or a doctor. It is an unwise performance for any short intervals. A new congressman must begin at the foot of the class and spell up. Of course, the more brains, tact, energy, courage, and industry he has, the quicker he will get up. If he possesses those qualities, and if his constituents will keep him in the House, he is as certain to rise as the sparks fly upward. No human power can keep him down."

"The best rule, it seems to me is for a district to select a man with at least fair capacity, industrious, energetic, sober and courageous, and keep him so long as he does his job as a duty faithfully and well. Such a man will gradually rise to high position and influence in the House. His wide acquaintance with members helps him amazingly in doing things."

Such words coming from Honorable Champ Clark ought to have some weight with the people in electing a congressman. When Mr. Clark made the speech from which the above is an extract, he had been in Congress twenty-two years, and is now serving his twenty-sixth year. Mr. Overstreet has been in Congress only three years, and the longer he remains there, the better service he is able to render the people. No one will accuse Mr. Overstreet of being an obsequious man. On the contrary, he is regarded by his friends as being a man far above the average in ability, and he is brimful of energy.

For twenty-five years before he was elected to Congress, and when he abandoned the law to take his seat in Congress, his practice was large and lucrative. Since he was elected a member of the House, he has made a number of speeches on important questions, and his speeches show deep study and careful preparation. In fact, Mr. Overstreet does not talk as often as the average member, but when he does rise to speak, he always has something to say, and he receives respectful attention from his colleagues.

On October 23, 1919, the House had under consideration the contested election case of Tague against Fitzgerald. Mr. Overstreet was a member of the Committee on Elections, and after hearing the evidence in the case, a majority of the committee filed a report in favor of the contestant, while a minority report was filed on behalf of the contestant.

Mr. Overstreet was ranking Democrat on the committee, and the duty devolved upon him to write the report and make the principal speech on the Democratic side of the House. It will be impossible in this article to give the full speech of Mr. Overstreet in the case, but in order that the voter may know how well he prepared himself, we will quote two or three of the opening paragraphs of his speech. He said:

"Mr. Speaker, in an ejectment suit at common law, the plaintiff must recover on the strength of his own title and not upon the weakness of the defendant's title. The contestant, Mr. Peter F. Tague, has attacked the title to the office now held by the contestant, Mr. Fitzgerald, and the law of the land and this precedent, as adopted by Congress last year, Mr. Tague has burdened of proving the charges he has made in order for you to unseat the contestant."

"Mr. Speaker, I confess I went into the investigation of this case with my mind inclined toward the side of the calm and affable gentleman, the contestant. We are human beings, and none of us are perfect. I had heard the story from one member and another of how the contestant had been defeated in the election, and unconsciously my mind had become inclined towards contestant's side of the case before I had ever read the record or given it any study. I repeat that when I undertook to investigate the merits of this controversy with Mr. Tague for the past four years. You have learned to like him, as he has a cordial handshake and a pleasant smile for everyone, and I know you must have been impressed with the story you heard concerning the wrongs he suffered at the hands of Mr. Fitzgerald and Mr. Lomax, the alleged political boss of Ward 5 in the city of Boston. I shall ask you to lay aside any bias or prejudice that may be resting on your minds either for or against the parties so deeply interested in the result of this contest, and follow me while I undertake to show you how I reached the conclusions set forth in the minority views filed by myself and Mr. Johnson. When you are called upon to pass on the title of the office of one of your fellow-members, you are asked to discharge a very sacred and solemn duty. You should approach the trial of this case with the same feeling of responsibility that is imparted to the jurymen when they are empaneled to decide questions submitted to it for their consideration."

"I have no personal interest in the case. I am a member of the Committee on Elections to which the contest was referred, and I am simply trying to discharge my duty as a member by giving you the reasons that impelled me to dissent from the majority report."

Mr. Overstreet then went into an exhaustive analysis of this contested election case and amply supported his contentions by the record submitted before his committee. At the conclusion of his masterly argument, Mr. Claud Kitchen and ex-Speaker Champ Clark warmly congratulated him and openly stated it was decided by the strongest argument made on the entire debate.

CONGRESSMAN J. W. OVERSTREET

On another occasion before the war ended, and the House was in committee of the whole house in the state of the Union, and had under consideration the bill (H. R. 4280) to provide revenue to defray war expenses, Mr. Overstreet again made a speech that attracted attention among the members. It was a strong and dignified discussion, as will appear from the opening paragraph, in which he said:

"The gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. Kitchen) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Fordney), the champions of this bill on either side of the House, have consumed nine hours in discussing its different features. These able, distinguished, and learned gentlemen at the very outset of the arguments made the astounding statement that the bill had not the sanction or endorsement in the opinion of a single member of the committee from which it was reported. This able body of men has spent days and weeks poring over and studying the different provisions of this bill, in order that the great burdens it imposes upon the people would be so distributed that they would fall on all alike, but they tell us plainly that if we were not at war, that there is hardly a provision in the bill that would commend itself to this body. After spending weeks and weeks in framing a bill that might meet the requirements of the hour and raise the desired revenue without laying a heavy hand on anyone, they acknowledge they have failed and confess their inability to frame such a measure. They were in better position than we who are not members of the Ways and Means Committee to get to the very roots of this question. They have conferred with experts in finance and with the soundest political economists of the country. They have access to all the data at the command of the government. They have had other revenue bills before them for a guide. They have investigated methods of other countries engaged in war, and no one doubts for a moment that they have been painstaking, conscientious, and faithful in presenting a bill that they hoped might be acceptable to the American people. But I am convinced that no bill could be framed that would satisfy 100,000,000 people. Their interests are diversified and often antagonistic, and when you go down into a man's pockets it is like pulling out his teeth. The members of this House have been flooded with letters, telegrams and protests from different interests to be affected asking that they be spared the burden of this tax, and that the burdens be placed somewhere else. No doubt, some amendments will be offered that will slightly vary some of the provisions of the legislation, but in the main the bill will stand as it is written, because the great amount of money demanded must be raised, and must be raised by taxation."

There appeared in the Savannah Morning News of April 20, 1918, a dispatch from Washington, which will be of interest to friends of Mr. Overstreet who did not see the paper at that time. The following is a verbatim copy of the dispatch, which will be of interest to friends of Mr. Overstreet who did not see the paper at that time. The following is a verbatim copy of the dispatch, which will be of interest to friends of Mr. Overstreet who did not see the paper at that time.

"Congressman Overstreet, of the First District, made one of the most forceful addresses in the House this week that has been delivered in that body in many a day. It was not long, it was not laborious and burdened with meaningless rhetoric. It got down to the crux of the national situation today, and the applause that greeted him showed that he touched a popular chord in the House of his four hundred and odd colleagues."

The following, in part, is Mr. Overstreet's ringing address, which falls for less talk and more "do."

"Mr. Chairman, I desire to say a few words only. I have consumed very little of the valuable time of this committee. There is no longer any doubt among all well-informed people of this country that the entrance of the United States into this great war was unavoidable. Every person who has kept up with the progress of the war knows that our President exhausted every means known to diplomacy to keep us out of it. For nearly three years before war was declared he almost begged the German Kaiser to let our people alone and permit them to live in peace. He made it clear to rulers of all belligerent nations that this country desired to remain at peace with them all. Time and again he implored the Imperial German government to respect our rights upon the high seas and desist from destroying our commerce and firing upon our flag, but Germany would listen to none of these appeals, and slowly, but gradually, we were dragged into the most stupendous and horrible war in the history of the world. As the great battle rages in France, the Premier of England is calling upon his government to send more help and to send it quickly. From now on we must rush our preparations and hurry to the front with all possible dispatch. The steel men must work faster; the carpenters must be kept busy; munitions workers ought to work overtime; airplane manufacturers must work day and night. The Congress should waste no time; every line of red tape should be cut, and every man, woman and child living under the protection of the Stars and Stripes should do his whole part of the great task before us—the overwhelming defeat of the German army and the crushing of the Kaiser."

"It is true, money, munitions, and men have been supplied without stint to this nation. Every demand upon Congress by the Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy has been met, not as promptly in some instances as should have been done, perhaps, but the people's representatives have not hesitated to give to the President ample authority and all the means necessary for prosecuting the war, and the people themselves will indorse what has been done. They are willing to make the necessary sacrifices. They will give more money and more men, but they want results. Delays will not longer be tolerated; the useless consumption of time is becoming tiresome. Only last Saturday the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. Sherley), the able chairman of the Appropriation Committee, said what we must do is to get down to business and quit wasting time. The country is impatient for less talk and more action in Congress. The distinguished gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. Garret), chairman of the Committee on Rules, recently warned the House that unless more work and less talk was done, a special rule would be brought in to cut off debate. I for one will welcome such a rule, and the majority will welcome it and vote for it. The time is wasted by the few who constantly occupy the floor. By an examination of the daily record of this House it can be readily seen that two or three dozen members are responsible for the wasting of time the distinguished gentlemen from Kentucky and Tennessee referred to in their recent remarks."

"Our boys are going to the front in large numbers in answer to their country's call, and the fathers and mothers of these noble boys demand that we waste not a minute of the time that is so precious when the lives of their boys are being offered up for the perpetuity of our government and for the safety and security of those who remain at home."

There are four hundred and thirty-five members of the House and ninety-six members in this Senate. The principal work in Congress is done in committee rooms. The oldest members always have the best committee assignments. If a man stays in Congress long enough, he becomes chairman of some committee, because chairmanship comes by length of service and in no other way, and the chairman is the man who has the honor of introducing and pressing to passage legislation asked for by the various departments of the government. For instance, you often hear of the "Underwood Law," because Mr. Underwood was chairman of the committee on Ways and Means, which reported the bill, and the bill bears his name. Honorable Carter Glass was chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee that reported the currency bill a few years ago, and the currency bill was known as the "Glass Bill." Honorable W. C. Adams, a distinguished Georgian, was chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and everyone has heard a good deal of the "Adams Law," and so on. No individual member of the House or Senate passes a bill of national importance. It takes team work of various committees and members of the House and Senate.

Your congressman has attended all the sessions of Congress since he was elected, and he has participated in many important debates and voted on all important measures, as the records will show. He has been untiring in his efforts to improve the postal facilities of the district. He has been active and diligent in other departments of the government in behalf of his constituents. He has been successful in having released from the army and navy boys who enlisted without the consent of their parents or guardians, or whose parents were old and infirm and needed their help. And Mr. Overstreet personally looks after all these matters, going down to the different departments and presenting each case. Hundreds of letters have been received by the congressman from his constituents thanking him for his efforts in their behalf. Here is a sample of some of the letters of file in his office in Washington:

"Your kindness to our family has been great. Words are inadequate to express my appreciation. As soon as Fred arrives, he will be carried to his mother who is still in the sanitarium. My brother begs me to say to you that he will not be long enough for him to ever forget the favors you have done his two sons."

This letter was written by a very estimable lady who lives in Mr. Overstreet's district. She had two nephews in the service; one of them had been troubled with the War Department, and Mr. Overstreet straightened that out; the other was away from home and joined the navy without the consent of his mother, and he was under age, but told the recruiting officer he was old enough to join. When the mother found out that her young son had run away and joined the navy, she was nearly distracted with grief, and she became extremely ill. The doctors advised her to be taken to a sanitarium for treatment, and said unless her boy could be released from the service, her illness was likely to prove fatal. As soon as Mr. Overstreet was notified of the situation he immediately called to see the Secretary of the Navy and laid the case before him. The secretary forthwith issued orders for the release of the boy. The letter above referred to was a grateful acknowledgment of the services rendered by the Congressman. Many other letters of a similar character could be cited, but that is not necessary.

We must not omit to call attention to an article that appeared in the Atlanta Constitution of January 30, 1919, a special from Washington showing how Congressman Overstreet called the hand of the Republican leaders who were trying to embarrass the administration. The article follows:

"Talking about faying the Republicans in Congress for their irritating, exasperating policy of nagging at the present Democratic administration—done for political purposes, of course whenever an opportunity arises or can be forced—it was left to a Georgian to administer publicly on the floor a stinging hide-tanning rebuke to them."

"And J. W. Overstreet, of the First District, did it last night in a twenty-minute congressional barrage that reminded a veteran of the Argonne of one of the terrific, withering sweeping fires of the American machine gunners when they mowed the Boche positions like a tractor harvester ploughing through a field of ripened grain."

"The Republicans jumped to their feet, and crowded around the Georgian with defying interruptions and angry gestures, but the South Georgia congressman kept his fire up without cessation, barring for a moment and then sniping, all the while running his political feet to the dugouts and shell-craters, not even giving them time to kamikaze had they been disposed to hoist the white flag of truce."

"The fact is, Congressman Overstreet, who is a modest and discreet listener, but a regular Lewis gun in action, has been sitting in Congress for the last two years listening at the leaders on the Republican side criticize directly and indirectly the very policies of the government they have supported, and by cutting, scathing remarks endeavor to embarrass the President in a program they dared not openly oppose, until he had grown sick and tired of the practice, which has our growing more acute as the presidential campaign of 1920 has drawn closer. He decided he would tell them what he thought about it, and he did."

"The Georgian spoke well and forcibly. He said what many Democrats have been wanting to say for a long time."

"It will not cause the Republicans to stop their tirade against the South, nor will it cause them to play more fairly the game of politics to which even national and international legislation must now become subordinate. But it does illustrate that a Southern member of Congress is not afraid to call the hand of the whole Republican machine."

Of course, it goes without saying that your congressman is deeply in terested in agriculture, because his father is purely an agricultural district. In every county in it, farming is carried on to some extent, and all of the counties which comprise the First District, except McIntosh and Chatham, depend entirely upon agriculture and stock raising, and McIntosh and Chatham also. Mr. Overstreet communicates with the farmers, and tells them he is anxious to mail them literature on agriculture and farmers' bulletins on the soil, and he will only write to him and indicate what they desire.

In a speech delivered by Mr. Overstreet, already referred to herein, he was one of the first members from the South to vigorously oppose an attempt on the part of the Republic of the House to put a tax of $2.50 on every bale of cotton raised by the farmer. Mr. Overstreet took the position that this would be a consumption tax, and that it was unfair and unjust. The effort to impose it was defeated.

It would be impossible in this statement to fully review Mr. Overstreet's activities in behalf of the farmers, but his record and votes on all measures affecting their interests, fully and abundantly bear out the statement that he is their faithful and proven friend.

Your congressman might have favored some measures you did not approve of, but you must bear in mind that he has been serving as a member of Congress since the Republic in a most momentous period of our country's history. And remember further, that he has had to vote on hundreds of important matters, and if he failed to please you in two or three instances, but represented your views in the great majority of cases, you should give him your whole-hearted and loyal support. His duty is to represent all the people and do the greatest good to the largest number. And you can rest assured of one thing, he votes his honest convictions on all matters that come before Congress, and he is a thoughtful and judicious legislator.

We honestly believe the district would make a great mistake if it failed to return Mr. Overstreet to Congress. He is not given to spectacular methods, but the work for his district and party has been quiet and dignified, but persistent. His services have been appreciated by his colleagues, and his worth and ability are recognized by the statesmen of both political parties. He is now in better position to serve his constituents and the country, and in case a new man should be elected to take Mr. Overstreet's place, he would have to begin where the congressman began more than three years ago, and it would take a new man just three years to learn what Mr. Overstreet now knows, even though he has the ability and energy that our congressman is known to possess.

In speaking of qualifications for public office Thomas Jefferson said the voter should ask touching the candidate, is he honest? He faithful? He competent? Surely the voter can answer these questions concerning Mr. Overstreet in the affirmative. In addition, we would remind the voter of Mr. Overstreet's experience. By these standards he is willing to be judged, and if his candidacy for reelection meets the approval of his fellow citizens, he and his friends will be gratified.

"I COULD NOT ASK TO FEEL BETTER"

Had Terrible Nervous Chills And Could Hardly Dig A Thing Before 'King Tanalee'.

"I just couldn't ask to feel better than I do now since I've taken Tanalee," Mrs. Anna Yates, a popular farm woman from the Martin Brown factory, living at 426 East Jacob Street, Louisville, Ky.

"I just hate to think of the awful condition I was in. I have had a few weeks ago with my stomach badly out of order and my nerves almost completely broken down. I had a poor appetite and even the light food I did eat disagreed with me and caused me awful suffering after my meals. I could not sleep, my nerves were all shaken and my sleep was broken and restless. Every morning I felt so weak and worn-out I hardly had strength enough to go to my work."

"My uncle had been taking Tanalee and was so well pleased with it he advised me to try it. I have taken only three bottles but I have improved so wonderfully that I am feeling like a different person altogether. My appetite is just fine and I am eating anything and everything I please without suffering afterwards at all. My nerves are steady and calm as he and I have not had a nervous chill since I first started taking Tanalee. I have a splendid color and I am enjoying perfect rest and sleep every night. My work is now a real pleasure because I am feeling strong and healthy and full of life and energy."

BULLOCH TIMES AND STATESBORO NEWS.

A FEW WORDS FROM THE OLD MAN.
Mr. Editor:

Owing to my physical condition, I am unable to do the work I did in my younger days, but I read a good deal and ponder over what I read and am disgusted with what I read in some of our newspapers.

Politics is rampant in our country, and if some of the candidates for office are as bad as some say they are, they ought to be in the penitentiary; but we can't believe everything we hear or read during a political campaign. Much is being said about the "League of Nations," but I doubt if one-third of those who talk so much about it could give you a proper definition of the term.

Well, there are two men nominated for President, and they are both Yankees, who care nothing for the South only to get their votes, and while and when the election they are done. It has always been so. These Northern gents have no sympathy for the South.

I can't vote for one with a clear conscience. Never have since the election. Between the States, knowing what I do.

I may not be able to vote in the coming election, but there are two home candidates for office whom I am anxious to see elected. H. B. Strang for Judge of the Georgia circuit and Walter Shoupard for Congress. I have known Strang for many years, and know him to be a fine lawyer and a Christian gentleman, and he would make a good presiding officer. And W. W. Shoupard, I have known him from a small boy, and he, too, is a fine lawyer and a Christian gentleman, and would make a good representative in our national Congress. He made a good stock.

If we had good men in office, our country would be in better condition than it is.

Respectfully,
R. W. DARBY.

BIG PARTIES' FACE A NEW DIFFICULTY

VOTE OF COLORED WOMEN IN DOUBTFUL STATES IS MOST SERIOUS PROBLEM.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—While this or that is being claimed by national party orators as to the effect of Tennessee's ratification of the woman suffrage amendment on the presidential and congressional campaign, the Democrats have one very serious fact staring them in the face. Practically all the colored women who can do so will go to the polls and vote; many of the white women will have a tendency to stay at home.

Republican spellbinders assert that a majority of the newly-enfranchised women will vote for the Republican candidates because the women want a change of administration. Democratic spellbinders declare that the majority of the women just invested with the vote will favor the Democratic ticket because they are for the fundamental principle of the league of nations which is prevention of war wherever such prevention is possible. How the conflicting currents of emotion and thought will balance in such respects is a matter of conjecture and opinion.

But to get a fair chance for the nation as a whole on the new suffrage development, the white women of the doubtful states will have to come out in full force and vote. The colored women will come out in every one of these states in full force without being urged and may turn enough of them to decide the presidential and congressional election. They are pretty likely to vote the Republican ticket according to the habit of their race. Democratic women who are not enthusiastic over the new suffrage development are especially requested to be present at the opening.

COUNTY POLICE MAKE MANY MORE BIG RAIDS

OVER TWO THOUSAND GALLONS OF BEER AND 100 GALLONS OF SHINE CAPTURED.

County Policemen Walton and Brangan and Deputy Sheriff Mitchell have been on the job in earnest during the past week, and the result has been a banner week in the moonshine harvest.

Thursday of last week a raid in the Bay district resulted in the capture and destruction of more than 1,600 gallons of beer, together with a small quantity of moonshine and one still outfit. Yesterday another raid, or rather a series of raids, in the same district netted six stills of 50 to 80 gallons capacity each, 1,000 gallons of beer, 100 gallons of shine, four barrels of blackstrap and 63 60-gallon barrels used in the manufacture of the shine.

Incidentally, a raid in the city last Saturday netted one small lard can still and a small quantity of shine, as well as the arrest of a negro drayman, Wesley Brown, who is under bond for violating the prohibition law.

Atlanta, Aug. 24.—A feeling of indignation is still strong in Buford over the conduct of Thomas E. Watson at the Merchants Hotel Wednesday night which resulted in his arrest. A number of prominent women of that city have signed a petition asking that the National Democratic administration recently culminated in a political convention which committed the presidential state convention to irrevocable opposition to the treaty of peace and which voted down resolutions endorsing Woodrow Wilson and the national Democratic administration.
